3. (C) Logistics:

a. Periodic Logistics Report:

(1) The value of the Periodic Logistic Report (RCS AVHGD-35), became more apparent during this reporting quarter. Non-divisional US Army artillery units in I CTZ and II CTZ began to receive reports of actions taken by the responsible support command. As a result, the status of PLL has been improved.

(2) The frequency of submitting this report should be changed to every two weeks. Less reporting would result and more time would be available in which support agencies could react.

b. The lack of the following maintenance float items at USASC, QUI NHON and CAM RANH continues to adversely affect the support of artillery units in II CTZ:

- (2) Panoramic Telescope, M117 (105mm How SP)
- (3) Generator Set, PU 107 (AN/MFQ-4A Radar)
- (4) M108, 105mm How SP

c. The shortage of rawinsonde system expendable items has caused the deadline of several of these systems in II CTZ.

d. The long lines of communications between the US Army Support Command, QUI KHON, the DA LANG Sub-area Command (275 Km), and the FSA at QUANG HA (145 KM) make it imperative to have aircraft for the transportation of artillery weapons repair parts and other critical supplies. The air transport capability for resupply functions between I and II CTZ is inadequate.

d. Morale and Discipline:

SECTION 2 (C) COMMANDER'S OBSERVATIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS
Part I. Observation (lessons learned)

a. Item: Naval Gunfire in Support of Operations.

Discussion: There are many II CTZ areas of tactical importance in which naval gunfire can be used to support operations. The US Navy provides fire support to ARVN and FVNAF; however, US observers and spotters must adjust and control the gunfire.

Observation: Field Artillery forward observers and key infantry personnel to platoon leader level should receive service school training in the control and adjustment of naval gunfires.

b. Item: Coordination and Clearance of Fires.

Discussion: The presence of friendly non-US forces and civilians in the combat area of operations has required the establishment of coordination and clearance procedures to avoid conflict between units and to preclude wounding or killing of non-combatants.

Observation: Procedures used in Vietnam would be a worth-while addition to tactics classes in US Army Service Schools.

c. Item: Shell APERS-T XM-546 (Beehive).

Discussion: Beehive ammunition was employed against enemy personnel during the enemy attack of Landing Zone Bird on 27 December 1966. Units occupying this LZ were Battery B, 2d Battalion.

CONFIDENTIAL

19th Artillery (105mm Towed) and Battery C, 6th Battalion, 16th Artillery (155mm Towed). Two rounds of 105mm beehive ammunition were expended and, though enemy KIA attributable to this ammunition could not be determined, it was credited with breaking up the attack. NVA forces suffered 82 KIA.

Observation: The beehive round in direct fire is extremely effective.

d. Item: Combat Support Coordination Centers

Discussion: The enemy attacked PLAIKU on 7 January 1967 with mortars and infantry. Location of the enemy mortars by countermortar radar was hindered by heavy friendly counterfires. The radars could not discern between friendly and enemy tracks.

Observation: Defensive techniques of Combat Support Coordination Centers should include means of controlling counterfire measures if holding these fires appears prudent.

PART II, Recommendation:

Recommend that the Periodic Logistics Report (RCS AVHGD-35) be revised to include a two week reporting period instead of one week.
