MEMORANDUM FOR SEE DISTRIBUTION

SUBJECT: Arms Control: A Selected Bibliography

1. The latent threat posed by nuclear, chemical and conventional weapons manned by large, deployed land, sea and air forces holds the world at great risk. Hardly a week goes by without a major publication appearing, addressing some type of negotiation taking place in an effort to defuse this threat to national, alliance, and world order.

2. The purpose of this selected bibliography is to provide the student of arms control a starting point for his/her research of the subject. The bibliography contains publications covering the entire spectrum of arms control and reduction: nuclear, chemical, conventional to include arms transfers. The publications listed are located in the US Army War College Library and do provide a broad background of information for those individuals interested in arms control. For additional information, please contact the compiler, Mrs. Dorothy Kriete, Reference Librarian, US Army War College.

".....With failed negotiations, prospective improvements in nuclear capabilities and strained superpower relations, the fabric of previously agreed limits on the nuclear competition has begun to unravel.....

"New agreements are built on those that have preceded them. If this scaffolding falls down, how can it be reconstructed, and what will take its place? The key to arresting the slide toward arms decontrol is an ability to iron out compliance questions that undermine current agreements and work against ratification of new ones....."
