8. MILITARY LIFE AND FAMILY WELL-BEING

The preceding chapters have described the family life situation of military families and examined a number of the ways these families are affected by their participation in the military community and way of life. These include: moves and separations; programs, services, and facilities for military families; the employment of civilian spouses of military personnel, and family income; and the situation of military families in which both spouses are members of the military (dual-military couples) or there is a single parent who is a member of the military.

The tables in this chapter present data on military wives' problems and satisfactions with the military life. These tables are organized in three groups: wives' problems and satisfactions with location, services, and other aspects of the military life (Tables 8.1-8.4); wives' overall satisfaction with the military as a way of life (Tables 8.5-8.14); and the relationship between the wife's and husband's satisfaction with the military as a way of life (Tables 8.15-8.16).

Tables 8.1-8.4 describe wives' satisfaction with different features of the military life, including: military housing; military pay and allowances; military job security; military retirement benefits; military promotion opportunities; rights of civilian spouses; levels of demands made on civilian spouses; family separations; PCS moves; dental and medical care; environment for families; opportunities for education/training for civilian spouses; Service attitude toward families and family problems; time available for the military member to spend with family; and availability of job opportunities/employment for civilian spouses.

Tables 8.5-8.14 present wives' response to the question, "Now, taking all things together, how satisfied are you as a spouse with the military as a way of life?".

Tables 8.15-8.16 use data from couples in which both spouses responded to the question on overall satisfaction with the military as a way of life.

For these couples, the tables show the joint response distribution, i.e., the cross-tabulation of wife's by husband's satisfaction level.

9. FAMILY ISSUES AND RETENTION

This chapter presents data on the relationship of several family factors to members' retention plans. The data come from two sources. Members' retention plans, their own satisfaction with military life, and the description of family life situation are taken from questionnaire responses in the 1985 DoD Member Survey. In addition, for analyses of the relationship of wife's satisfaction with military life to member's retention plans, the wife's report of her satisfaction is used. The analyses that include wife's satisfaction are carried out using both husband's and wife's data for couples in which both responded to the survey; for other analyses, which do not use the wife's report of her satisfaction with military life, the Enlisted and Officer survey files are used.

For these analyses, the member's current year of service is used as a control. For enlisted men, the outcome measure is the member's self-assessed probability that he will reenlist at the end of his current obligation. The specific outcome is whether he says his probability of reenlisting is high (9 in 10 or higher). For officers, the outcome measure is the total expected years of service. The specific outcome examined is whether the member plans to remain in the military for 15 or more years. Current years of service are grouped into three categories: 1-6, 7-14, and 15 or more YOS.

Tables 9.1-9.2 show the distribution of spouse employment status and family life course stage by years of service. Tables 9.3-9.6 show members' plans to remain in the Armed Forces by spouse labor force status and family life course stage.

Using couple data, Tables 9.7-9.8 show the relationship of wife's satisfaction with military life to husband's military career intentions. Tables 9.9-9.10 show the joint effects of husband's and wife's satisfaction on husband's military career plans.

APPENDIX C

STANDARD ERROR METHODOLOGY

The estimates in this report are based on a probability sample of the survey population, where a probability sample is defined as a sample for which every member of the survey population has a determinable non-zero probability of being selected. The estimates are subject to sampling variability because they are based on a sample rather than on the entire population. However, a characteristics of probability samples is that they permit measures of sampling variability to be calculated from the sample data.

One measure of sampling varability is the standard error of a survey estimate, which measures the variation among the estimates from all possible samples selected according to the particular sample design. The standard error provides a measure of the precision with which the estimate approximates the average value of the estimates resulting from all of the possible samples. The difference between this average value and the population value being estimated (i.e. the bias of the estimate) equal to zero for unbiased estimates.

The estimates presented in this report consist primarily of estimated percentages. The standard error of a percentage estimate from a simple random sample with replacement is:

$$s = \sqrt{p(100-p)/n}$$

where s is the standard error;

p is the percentage estimate; and n is the relevant sample size (i.e., the number of individuals who responded to a particular question).

For example, consider the percentage of spouses of Army officers who were self employed. From Table 6.2 this estimate is found to be 8.5 percent based on 1,209 respondents. If the survey were a simple random sample with replacement, we could substitute the values in the equation and calculate the standard error:

$$s = \sqrt{(8.5)(91.5)/1,209} = 0.80$$

The sample estimate and an estimate of its standard error together permit the construction of an interval which, with prescribed confidence, brackets the average result for the given sample design. Three commonly used confidence intervals are defined as follows:

1. In approximately two-thirds of the possible samples, an interval from one standard error below the estimate to one standard error above the estimate would include the average value of all possible samples. Such an interval is called a 67-percent confidence interval.

2. Approximately nineteen-twentieths of the possible sample intervals from two standard errors below the estimate to two standard errors above the estimate would include the average value of all possible samples. Such an interval is called a 95-percent confidence interval.

3. For almost all (99 percent) the possible samples, the interval from three standard errors below the estimate to three standard errors above the estimate would include the average value of all possible samples. Such as interval is called a 99-percent confidence interval.

Thus a 95 percent confidence interval for the above estimate (i.e., two standard errors above and below the estimate) would be between 6.9 percent and 10.1 percent (i.e., 8.5 percent $\pm$ (0.80 percent) x 2). That is, the percent of spouses of Army officers who were self employed is between 6.9 and 10.1 percent.

It is often of interest to construct a confidence interval around the difference between two percentage estimates. The standard error of the difference between two percentage estimates from a simple random sample with replacement is equal to the square root of the sum of the standard errors squared. That is:

p_1 and p_2 are the percentage estimates; and n_1 and n_2 are the respective sample sizes.

Using this formula for the standard error, it is possible to construct intervals about the difference with prescribed confidence as discussed above. For example, the percent of spouses of officers at CONUS locations who were in the civilian work force and unemployed can be found in Table 6.2 to be 5.7 percent. The percent of spouses of officers at OCONUS locations who were in the civilian work force and unemployed can be found to be 7.0 percent from the same table. If the survey were a simple random sample with replacement, the standard error of the difference in these two percentages, 7.0 percent minus 5.7 percent, or 1.3 percent, could be computed as

$$= 0.68.$$

The 95 percent confidence interval for the difference would be between 0.0 percent and 2.7 percent (i.e., 1.3 percent $\pm$ (0.68) x 2).

However, the sample design for the 1985 DoD Survey of Military Spouses differs from a simple random sample with replacement in two important ways:

1. The sample design consists of a single stage, stratified design with disproportionate sampling; and

2. The sample was selected from a finite population without replacement.

Both of these differences cause the standard error to differ from that which would result from a simple random sample with replacement, as explained below.

Stratification often produces some reduction in variance due to the grouping of homogeneous population members in forming the strata. The effect of disproportionate sampling, which results in weights that vary in magnitude across the strata, is typically an increase in the variance of the sample estimates. Sample designs whose allocations are related to stratum variance contributions are the exception. Because the primary purpose of stratification in this sample design was to ensure adequate sample sizes for different subpopulation groups, the increase in variance due to disproportionate sampling largely outweighs any reduction in variance due to forming homogeneous strata. Therefore, a conservative estimate of the design effect can be obtained by computing the effects of unequal weighting[1] for the various analysis domains presented in the report.

The design effect, D, of a percentage estimate, p, is given by the ratio of v, the actual estimate of the variance of p, to the variance of p for a simple random sample of the same size. That is:

where n is the number of respondents involved in the estimate. If an estimate of D is available, then an estimate of the actual variance of p is given by and an estimate of the standard error is given by $\sqrt{v}$.

Tables C.1 - C.12 present approximate design effects for a subset of the population subgroups considered in this report. An example of the use of these tables is given by considering how the standard error previously calculated may be modified. An approximate design effect for the subgroup consisting of spouses of Army officers is found in Table C.1 to be 1.02. An estimate of the standard error of this percent is computed as

or

$$\sqrt{(1.02)(8.5)(91.5)/1209} = 0.81 \quad .$$

An approximate 95 percent confidence interval for the estimate would be between 9.8 percent and 13.2 percent.

As another example, consider the difference in the percentage estimates of spouses of officers at CONUS and OCONUS locations who were unemployed. As cited above, the two estimates are 5.7 percent and 7.0 percent respectively, yielding a difference of 1.3 percent. The standard error of the difference can be computed by multiplying the standard error of each percent by an approximate design effect. From Table C.4, the approximate design effects for spouses of officers at CONUS and OCONUS locations are found to be 1.14 and 1.08 respectively. An estimate of the standard error of the difference is:

$$s_d = \sqrt{[(1.08)(7.0)(93.0)/1681] + [(1.14)(5.7)(94.3)/7809]}$$

An approximate 95 percent confidence interval for the difference would be between 0.0 percent and 2.7 percent.

Percentage estimates for domains other than those given in Tables C.1 - C.12, as well as estimates of population totals also presented in this report, will require direct calculation of the standard errors. An all inclusive set of design effect calculations was beyond the scope of the current project. A variety of computer software packages is currently available for this purpose.[2]

As noted above, the expression given for the variance of percentage estimates ignores the fact that the sample was selected without replacement from a finite population. When the sample size is small relative to the population size, any effect due to sampling without replacement from a finite population tends to be small and is often ignored in the computation of variances. The ratios of sample size to population size, f, for each of the design strata are presented in Table C.13 and C.14. In a few strata, these sampling fractions are in excess of 20 percent, so the reader may choose not to ignore this effect.

In order to take this effect into account, the variance must be multiplied by a finite population correction (fpc) factor. For a simple random sample, this factor is equal to 1-f. The standard error in this case is:

2. Shah, B. V. (1982). RTIFREQS: Program to Compute Weighted Frequencies, Percentages, and Their Standard Errors. Research Triangle Park, NC 27709.

$$s = \sqrt{(1-f)\ p(100-p)/n}\ .$$

Since simple random samples were selected within each stratum, the fpc factors given in Tables C.13 and C.14 are applicable to variances of percentage estimates computed for domains wholly contained within a design stratum. The fpc factors for domain estimates that span several strata are more complicated (see, for example, Kish, 1965, pp. 80-82).[3] These can be calculated directly by currently available computer programs.[4]

Applying the fpc factor always results in a reduction in the variance of the estimate. Thus, ignoring the factor yields a conservative variance estimate. Further rationale for ignoring the fpc, even when f is large, is that it may not be of interest to consider the sample estimate as an estimate of the finite population characteristic but rather as an estimate of an infinite superpopulation characteristic, in which case any variance reduction due solely to sampling a large proportion of the finite population is irrelevant. Cochran[5] provides a detailed discussion of these superpopulation considerations.

APPENDIX D

WEIGHTING METHODOLOGY FOR THE 1985 DoD SURVEYS OF ENLISTED AND OFFICER PERSONNEL AND MILITARY SPOUSES

WEIGHTING METHODOLOGY FOR THE 1985 DoD SURVEYS

1. Introduction

This appendix describes the weighting methodology used in the 1985 DoD Survey. It is in three sections, which describe the weighting methodology for: (1) the Member sample; (2) the military Spouse sample; and (3) the military Couple sample.

2. The Member Sample

2.1 Sample Design

The population from which the Member sample component of the 1985 DoD Surveys was selected consists of all military personnel who had completed at least four months of active-duty military service by September 30, 1984. A stratified one-stage design was used to select the Member sample. The two basic strata were enlisted personnel versus officers. Enlisted personnel were further stratified by sex, branch of Service, and length of active duty service (4 to 47 months versus 48 months or more). Officers were stratified by branch of service and sex. The sample was selected independently and with equal probability within the resultant 24 strata. Officers, females, Marine Corps personnel, and enlisted personnel with four or more years of service were sampled at disproportionately high rates to permit detailed analysis of these groups. Stratum definitions and sample sizes are given in Table 1.

2.2 The Survey Population

The analysis planned for the 1985 Member Survey is of members of the Military Services who were on active-duty at the time of survey administration. Therefore, data were not collected from sample members who separated from service between sample selection and survey administration.

Since most of the questionnaires were completed in March, 1985, the population to which the survey data is assumed to apply, after weighting, is limited to that consisting of all persons who had 10 months or more active duty military service as of March 30, 1985.

2.3 Response Rate

The last three columns of Table 1 give, respectively, the number of sample Members who were still on active duty when the survey was conducted, the number of completed Member questionnaires and the response rate for each stratum. The overall response rate achieved for the analysis domain of interest, as given by the ratio of the next-to-last column total to the second-from-last column total, is 71.4 percent.

2.4 Weighting the Data

Analysis weights have been provided for the sample respondents to permit acceptably precise estimation of characteristics of the survey population. They reflect the complex sampling design and provide some compensation for the potentially biasing effect of nonresponse to the survey. Specifically, the weights for the Member sample adjust for the level of disproportionality in the sample relative to the survey population and for differing response rates for subgroups of sample Members.

The weights are inflation factors such that the weight assigned to a sample member determines the member's contribution to an estimated population total or other parameter of interest. Specifically, the analysis weight for a sample member is the reciprocal of its probability of selection or sampling rate (known as its sampling weight), adjusted to account for survey nonresponse. The sampling weight, W(h), for each sample Member in stratum h (h=1,2,3,...,24) is

where

N(h) = the number of Members in the survey population who are in stratum h, and n(h) = the number of sample Members selected from stratum h.

The sampling weight for each stratum is given in the next-to-last column of Table 2.

Unit survey nonresponse occurs when no usable response is received from a sample member. To compensate for the potential bias caused by such nonresponse, the sampling weights of the survey respondents were adjusted so that their sum is equal to the number of Members in the survey population. Weighting class adjustments were used to compensate for nonresponse. Under this procedure, the survey population is divided into mutually exclusive weighting classes (groups) that are internally homogeneous with respect to important survey measurements or design features. Then the sampling weights for respondents within each weighting class are adjusted so that they sum to the population count for that class. The weighting classes used for the Member sample were the 24 sampling strata. They were chosen because of their expected internal homogeneity and because they are important analysis domains.

The analysis nonresponse adjusted weight for each responding Member in weighting class (stratum) h was obtained by multiplying his or her sampling weight by the following factor:

$$R(h) = \Sigma\, W(h) \;/\; \Sigma\, W(h)_R$$

where the numerator and denominator are the sums of sampling weights for all sample members and for responding members, respectively, in weighting class h. The analysis weight for each stratum is given in the last column of Table 2.

2.5 Using the Analysis Weights in Estimation Procedures

Consider the estimated total value, $\hat{T}_d$, of some characteristic of a domain (subset), d, of the survey population. The following formula provides an unbiased estimate:

$$\hat{T}_d = \Sigma\, W(h,i)\; y(i)\; \delta(i)_d \delta(i)_e,$$

where

W(h,i) = the design prescribed sampling weight for sample Member i in stratum h, y(i) = the value of the characteristic for the i-th sample Member,

$$\delta(i)_d = \begin{cases} 1, & \text{if the i-th sample Member is in the domain d} \\ 0, & \text{otherwise,} \end{cases}$$

$$\delta(i)_e = \begin{cases} 1, & \text{if the i-th sample Member is an eligible member of the survey population} \\ 0, & \text{otherwise, and} \end{cases}$$ the summation is over all sample Members. In practice, the sampling weights, W(h,i), are replaced in this formula by the analysis weights, as given in Table 2, in order to compensate for survey nonresponse. An estimated ratio, including a mean or a proportion, is given by the ratio of two estimated totals.

As an example of the application of the above procedure, suppose we want to estimate a characteristic for the domain, d, of the survey population consisting of active duty officers. Then $\delta(i)_d$ would be set to 1 for all sample members who are in that domain and to 0 for all other sample members. Additionally, $\delta(i)_e$ would be set to 1 or 0, accordingly as the i-th sample member is or is not an eligible member of the survey population. Suppose, in particular, we wanted to estimate the total number of dependents (excluding self and spouse) associated with domain d. Then y(i) will be the number of dependents that the i-th sample member has (as given by questionnaire item 67). Inserting these values into the above formula along with the corresponding analysis weight and summing over all sample members will yield the desired estimate. In practice, pre-existing computer software packages are used to make desired estimates. For example, the Statistical Analysis System (SAS) package contains estimation procedures that allow the user to specify analysis weights.

The above formulations provide valid estimates for any domain of the population from which the sample was selected, including the one consisting of those Members who had 10 months or more of active duty when the survey was fielded -- which is the survey population (or analysis domain) of particular interest for the present survey.

3. The Military Spouse Sample

3.1 Sample Design

The population from which the Military Spouse sample component of the 1985 DoD Surveys was selected consists of all spouses of active duty military personnel (Members) who had completed at least four months of military service by September 30, 1984. A sample of these Members was selected and the Spouse sample consists of spouses of sample Members.

A stratified one-stage design was used to select the Member sample (and hence the Spouse sample). The two basic strata were enlisted personnel versus officer status of the Member. Enlisted personnel were further stratified by sex, branch of service, and length of active duty service (4 to 47 months versus 48 months or more). Officers were stratified by branch of service and sex. The Member sample was selected independently and with equal probability within the resultant 24 strata. Officers, female Members, Marine Corps personnel, and enlisted personnel with four or more years of service were sampled at disproportionately high rates to permit detailed analysis of these groups. Stratum definitions and the corresponding numbers of sample Spouse selections (i.e., the numbers of married Members selected) are given in Table 3.

In addition to the sample of military Members and the sample of Military Spouses, the 1985 DoD Surveys involve a sample of military Couples. This sample consists of husband/wife pairs, each formed by a sample Member and a sample Spouse. The survey data for couple analysis were obtained by merging Spouse questionnaire data with the corresponding Member questionnaire data.

If all husband/wife pairs associated with sample Members were permitted to be in the Couple sample, a multiplicity problem would result. Specifically, Couples consisting of two Members (dual-military Couples) could then be selected twice, since both the husband and the wife had positive probabilities of being selected for the Member sample. If the resultant potential multiple counting of dual-military Couples were permitted, sample-based estimates of couple characteristics could be badly biased. Accordingly, the selection of a sample Couple was made conditional upon the Spouse's not having been selected for the Member sample.

The conditional inclusion criterion used for the Couple sample was also imposed for the Spouse sample. Consequently, a spouse is in the Spouse sample and the corresponding couple is in the Couple sample only when the spouse was not also selected for the Member sample. This exclusion was not necessary for the Spouse sample, for which there was no multiplicity problem. However, the resulting one-to-one correspondence between the Couple and Spouse samples is very desirable because of the simplifying effect it has upon the processing of the survey data. More importantly, the sets of potential respondents for the Member and for the Spouse questionnaires are mutually exclusive. Therefore, respondents were spared the burden of ever having to complete both questionnaires.

Spouses who were not in the Spouse sample because they had been selected for the Member sample could not be identified prior to fielding the questionnaires. Therefore, Spouse questionnaires were distributed to all spouses whose partners had been selected for the Member sample. Those who had already received one of the (earlier distributed) Member questionnaires were instructed only to answer two "screening" questions that asked their branch of Service and their sex, and to return the otherwise incompleted Spouse questionnaire. Nonsample spouses were identified in this way.

3.2 The Survey Population

The Spouse survey population consists of the non-divorced survivors of the linked Spouse cohort that existed at the time the Member survey population was defined. This excludes spouses of Members who, between sample selection and survey administration, were newly married, widowed, or divorced, or were separated from Service. DoD administrative files and questionnaire data provided the marital and active-duty status of each Member at the time of survey administration. Using this information, a total of 10,945 of the Spouse selections were found to be outside the Spouse survey population. An additional 527 Spouses indicated that they had been selected for the Member sample. Thus, a total of 73,912 of the Spouse selections were eligible members of the Spouse sample. The number of eligible sample Spouses is given in the second-from-last column of Table 3 for each stratum.

3.3 Survey Response

A total of 41,329 of the 73,912 eligible sample Spouses returned questionnaires, for a Spouse response rate of 55.92 percent. The number of respondents for each stratum is given in the next-to-last column of Table 3. Response rates are given in the last column, by stratum.

3.4 Weighting the Data

An analysis weight has been provided for each sample respondent to permit acceptably precise estimation of characteristics of the survey population. The basis for the analysis weights was the sampling weight for each sample Spouse, which is defined as the inverse of the Spouse's selection probability. The analysis weights for survey respondents were obtained by adjusting their sampling weights to account for nonresponding Spouses. Thus, the analysis weights reflect the complex sampling design by adjusting for the level of disproportionality in the sample relative to the survey population and, additionally, adjust for differing response rates for subgroups of Spouses. The weights are, in fact, inflation factors such that the weight assigned to a sample Spouse determines the Spouse's contribution to an estimated total or other parameter of interest.

As indicated previously, inclusion in the Spouse sample required the simultaneous occurrence of two events; namely, that the military partner be selected for the Member sample and that the spouse not be selected for the Member sample. Since male and female eligibles for the Member sample are in different sampling strata, the probabilities of selection of eligible husbands and wives are independent. Therefore, the selection probability for the i-th sample Spouse is equal to the probability, $P_M(h,i)$, that the Spouse's Member partner, who is in stratum h, was selected for the Member sample multiplied by the probability, $P_S(h,i)$, that the Spouse was not selected for the Member sample. Then, the corresponding Spouse sampling weight, W(h,i), is the product of the reciprocals of these two components, which will be denoted by $W_M(h,i)$ and $W_S(h,i)$. That is,

$$W(h,i) = W_M(h,i)\, W_S(h,i),$$

where

$$W_M(h,i) = \frac{N(h)}{n(h)}$$

N(h) = the number of Members in the survey population who are in stratum h, n(h) = the number of sample Members who are in stratum h, and

Two different nonresponse adjustments were made to the Spouse sampling weights. First, a nonresponse adjustment factor, R_{1h}, was calculated for each Member stratum, h, to compensate for the lack of information needed to determine the Spouse's active-duty status -- which was the case when neither the Spouse nor the corresponding Member responded. This factor is given by

where $r_1(i)$ equals zero or one, accordingly, when neither the Spouse nor the Member responded or when at least one of the pair responded. A nonresponse adjusted stratum h Member sampling weight, $W1_M(h,i)$, was calculated, where

$$W1_M(h,i) = W_M(h,i) / R_{1h}.$$

Then, the corresponding nonresponse adjusted Spouse sampling weights, W1(h,i), were calculated as follows:

$$W1(h,i) = \begin{cases} r1(i)W1_M(h,i)[1-W1_M(h',i)], & \text{if the Spouse was also eligible for selection (from Member stratum h'), and} \\ r1(i)W1_M(h,i), & \text{otherwise.} \end{cases}$$

To compensate specifically for Spouse nonresponse, a second adjustment factor, R_{2hs}, was calculated within post-strata s=1 or 2, with s=1 indexing active-duty military Spouses and s=2 indexing nonmilitary Spouses. The associated nonresponse adjustment factors were computed as follows:

$$R_{2hs} = [\Sigma\, W1(h,i)r_2(i)] \,/\, [\Sigma W1(h,i)],$$

where $r_2(i)$ is 1 if the Spouse provided a completed Spouse questionnaire, and is zero otherwise. The summations in the numerator and denominator of R_{2hs} extend over all sample Spouses within post-stratum s of stratum h with nonzero values of W1(h,i).

Finally, the analysis weight, W2(h,i), for sample Spouse i in post-stratum s of stratum h is given by

$$W2(h,i) = [W1(h,i)\; r_2(i)] \,/\, R_{2hs}.$$

Note that only responding Spouses, those with $r_2(i)=1$, have nonzero analysis weights.

A spouse associated with a Member in stratum h could be nonmilitary or could be an active duty military Member eligible for selection from any one of the 24 strata. Thus, there are up to 25 different Spouse analysis weights associated with each stratum. Table 4 gives the mean weight, the minimum weight, the maximum weight, and the sum of weights for each stratum as well as for the total Spouse sample. The sums are sample-based estimates of the corresponding numbers of persons in the Spouse survey population.

3.5 Estimation Procedures

Consider the estimated total value, $\hat{T}_d$, of some characteristic of a domain (subset), d, of the survey population. This is unbiasedly given by

$$\hat{T}_d = \Sigma\, W(h,i)\; y(i)\; \delta(i)_d \delta(i)_e,$$

W(h,i) = the design prescribed sampling weight for sample Spouse i associated with stratum h, y(i) = the value of the characteristic for the i-th sample Spouse,

$$\delta(i)_d = \begin{cases} 1, & \text{if the i-th sample Spouse is in the domain d} \\ 0, & \text{otherwise,} \end{cases}$$

$$\delta(i)_e = \begin{cases} 1, & \text{if the i-th sample Spouse is an eligible member of the suvey population} \\ 0, & \text{otherwise, and} \end{cases}$$ the summation is over all sample Spouses. In practice, the sampling weights, W(h,i), are replaced in this formula by the analysis weights, described in the preceding sections, in order to compensate for survey nonresponse. An estimated ratio, including a mean or a proportion, is given by the ratio of two estimated totals.

As an example of the application of the above procedure, suppose we want to estimate a characteristic for the domain, d, of the survey population consisting of active duty spouses. Then $\delta(i)_d$ would be set to 1 for all sample Spouses who are in that domain and to 0 for all other sample Spouses. Additionally, $\delta(i)_e$ would be set to 1 or 0, accordingly as the i-th sample Spouse is or is not an eligible member of the survey population. Suppose, in particular, we wanted to estimate the total number of dependents, excluding self and spouse, associated with domain d. Then y(i) will be the number of dependents that the i-th sample Spouse has (as given by Spouse questionnaire item 50). Inserting these values into the above formula along with the corresponding analysis weights and summing over all sample Spouses will yield the desired estimate. In practice, pre-existing computer software packages are used to make desired estimates.

The above formulations provide valid estimates for any domain of the population from which the sample was selected, including the one consisting of those persons married for 6 months or longer to Members who had 10 months or more of active duty when the survey was fielded -- which is the survey population (or analysis domain) of particular interest for the present survey. Caution in interpretation of results is advised because of the relatively low Spouse response rate.

4. The Military Couple Sample

4.1 Sample Design

The population from which the Military Couple sample component of the 1985 DoD Surveys was selected consists of all couples containing an active duty military person (Member) who had completed at least four months of military service by September 30, 1984. A sample of these Members was selected. From this sample, an associated Spouse sample, consisting of spouses of sample Members, was identified. The Couple sample consists of husband/wife pairs each containing a sample Member and sample Spouse. The survey data for couple analysis were obtained by merging Member questionnaire data with the corresponding Spouse questionnaire data.

A stratified one-stage design was used to select the Member sample (and hence the Couple sample). The two basic strata were enlisted personnel versus officer status of the Member. Enlisted personnel were further stratified by sex, branch of service, and length of active duty service (4 to 47 months versus 48 months or more). Officers were stratified by branch of service and sex. The Member sample was selected independently and with equal probability within the resultant 24 strata. Officers, female Members, Marine Corps personnel, and enlisted personnel with four or more years of service were sampled at disproportionately high rates to permit detailed analysis of these groups. Stratum definitions and the corresponding numbers of sample Couple selections (i.e., the numbers of married Members selected) are given in Table 5.

If all husband/wife pairs associated with sample Members were permitted to be in the Couple sample, a multiplicity problem would result. Specifically, Couples consisting of two Members (dual military Couples) could then be selected twice, since both the husband and the wife had positive probabilities of being selected for the Member sample. If the resultant potential multiple counting of dual military Couples were permitted, sample-based estimates of couple characteristics could be badly biased. Accordingly, the selection of a sample Couple was made conditional upon the Spouse's not having been selected for the Member sample.

The conditional inclusion criterion used for the Couple sample was also imposed for the Spouse sample. Consequently, a spouse is in the Spouse sample and the corresponding couple is in the Couple sample only when the spouse was not also selected for the Member sample. This exclusion was not necessary for the Spouse sample, for which there was no multiplicity problem. However, the resulting one-to-one correspondence between the Couple and Spouse samples is very desirable because of the simplifying effect it has upon the processing of the survey data. More importantly, the sets of potential respondents for the Member and for the Spouse questionnaires are mutually exclusive. Therefore, respondents were spared the burden of ever having to complete both questionnaires.

Couples who were not in the sample because the associated Spouse had been selected for the Member sample could not be identified prior to fielding the questionnaires. Therefore, Spouse questionnaires were distributed to all spouses whose partners had been selected for the Member sample. Those who had already received one of the (earlier distributed) Member questionnaires were instructed to only answer two "screening" questions that asked their branch of Service and their sex, and to return the otherwise incompleted Spouse questionnaire. Nonsample couples were identified in this way.

4.2 The Survey Population

The Couple survey population consists of the nondivorced survivors of the linked Couple cohort that existed at the time the Member survey population was defined. This excludes couples corresponding to Members who, between sample selection and survey administration, were newly married, widowed, or divorced, or were separated from Service. DoD administrative files and questionnaire data provided the marital and active-duty status of each Member at the time of survey administration. Using this information, a total of 10,945 of the Couple selections were found to be outside the Couple survey population. In addition, 527 Spouses indicated that they had been selected for the Member sample. Thus, a total of 73,912 of the Couple selections were eligible members of the Couple sample. The number of eligible sample Couples is given in the second-from-last column of Table 5 for each stratum.

4.3 Survey Response

There are several alternative definitions of a responding Couple. Preferable, and of most interest to the present study, is the definition of a responding Couple as one for which both partners responded. This provides maximum data for the Couple. A total of 33,724 of the 73,912 eligible Couples returned both questionnaires, for a response rate of 45.63 percent, for this definition. The corresponding number of respondents and response rate are given in the last two columns of Table 5 for each stratum.

A second definition of a responding Couple that is of potential interest is one for which either or both of the partners responded. There were 61,027 such respondents, yielding a response rate of 82.57 percent. The corresponding number of respondents and response rate for each stratum are given in the last two columns of Table 6.

4.4 Weighting the Data

Analysis weights have been provided for each sample respondent to permit acceptably precise estimation of characteristics of the survey population. The basis for the analysis weights was the sampling weight for each sample Couple, which is defined as the inverse of the Couple's selection probability. The analysis weights for survey respondents were obtained by adjusting their sampling weights to account for nonresponding Couples. Thus, the analysis weights reflect the complex sampling design by adjusting for the level of disproportionality in the sample relative to the survey population and, additionally, adjust for differing response rates for subgroups of Couples. The weights are, in fact, inflation factors such that the weight assigned to a sample Couple determines the Couple's contribution to an estimated total or other parameter of interest.

Two sets of Couple analysis weights were produced, one corresponding to each definition of a responding Couple given above. Because the number of respondents differed according to the definition, the value of the adjustment factor to compensate specifically for Couple nonresponse and, hence, the values of the two analysis weights also differed. The procedure and formulas used to calculate the two weights were identical. They are described below.

As indicated previously, inclusion in the Couple sample required the simultaneous occurrence of two events; namely, that the military partner be selected for the Member sample and that the spouse not be selected for the Member sample. Since male and female eligibles for the Member sample are in different sampling strata, the probabilities of selection of eligible husbands and wives are independent. Therefore, the selection probability for the i-th sample Couple is equal to the probability, $P_M(h,i)$, that the Member partner, who is in stratum h, was selected for the Member sample multiplied by the probability, $P_S(h,i)$, that the Spouse was not selected for the Member sample. Then, the corresponding Couple sampling weight, $W(h,i)$, is the product of the reciprocals of these two components, which will be denoted by $W_M(h,i)$ and $W_S(h,i)$. That is,

$$W(h,i) = W_M(h,i)\, W_S(h,i),$$

where

$$W_M(h,i) = \frac{N(h)}{n(h)}$$

$N(h)$ = the number of Members in the survey population who are in stratum h,

$n(h)$ = the number of sample Members who are in stratum h, and

$$W_S(h,i) = \begin{cases} \left[1 - \frac{n(h')}{N(h')} \right]^{-1}, & \text{if the Spouse is eligible for the Member sample and is in stratum h', and} \\ 1, & \text{otherwise.} \end{cases}$$

Two different nonresponse adjustments were made to the Couple sampling weights. First, a nonresponse adjustment factor, R_{1h}, was calculated for each Member stratum, h, to compensate for the lack of information needed to determine the Spouse's active duty status -- which was the case when neither the Spouse nor the corresponding Member responded. This factor is given by $$R_{1h} = [\sum_{h} W_M(h,i) r1(i)] \; / \; [\sum_{h} W_M(h,i)],$$

where $r_1(i)$ equals zero or one, accordingly, when neither the Spouse nor the Member responded or when at least one of the pair responded. A nonresponse adjusted stratum h Member sampling weight, $W1_M(h,i)$, was calculated, where

$$W1_M(h,i) = W_M(h,i) \; / \; R_{1h}.$$

Then, the corresponding nonresponse adjusted Couple sampling weights, W1(h,i), were calculated as follows:

$$W1(h,i) = \begin{cases} r1(i)W1_M(h,i)[1-W1_M(h',i)], & \text{if the Spouse was also eligible for selection (from Member stratum h'), and} \\ r1(i)W1_M(h,i), & \text{otherwise.} \end{cases}$$

To compensate specifically for Couple nonresponse, a second adjustment factor, R_{2hs}, was calculated within post-strata s=1 or 2, with s=1 indexing couples containing active duty military Spouses and s=2 indexing those with nonmilitary Spouses. The associated nonresponse adjustment factors were computed as follows:

$$R_{2hs} = [\Sigma\, W1(h,i) r_2(i)] \; / \; [\Sigma W1(h,i)],$$

where $r_2(i)$ is 1 if the Couple responded, and is zero otherwise. The summations in the numerator and denominator of R_{2hs} extend over all sample Couples within post-stratum s of stratum h with nonzero values of W1(h,i).

Finally, the analysis weight, W2(h,i), for sample Couple i in post-stratum s of stratum h is given by

$$W2(h,i) = [W1(h,i)\ r_2(i)] \ / \ R_{2hs}.$$

Note that only responding Couples, those with $r_2(i)=1$, have nonzero analysis weights.

A spouse associated with a Member in stratum h could be nonmilitary or could be an active duty military Member eligible for selection from any one of the 24 strata. Thus, there are up to 25 different Couple analysis weights associated with each stratum. Table 7 and Table 8 give the mean weight, the minimum weight, the maximum weight, and the sum of weights for each stratum as well as for the total Couple sample for the two definitions of a responding Couple, respectively. The sums are sample-based estimates of the corresponding numbers of couples in the Couple survey population.

4.5 Estimation Procedures

Consider the estimated total value, $\hat{T}_d$, of some characteristic of a domain (subset), d, of the survey population. This is unbiasedly given by

$$\hat{T}_d = \Sigma\ W(h,i)\ y(i)\ \delta(i)_d \delta(i)_e,$$

W(h,i) = the design prescribed sampling weight for sample Couple i associated with stratum h, y(i) = the value of the characteristic for the i-th sample Couple,

$$\delta(i)_d = \begin{cases} 1, & \text{if the i-th sample Couple is in the domain d} \\ 0, & \text{otherwise,} \end{cases}$$ the summation is over all sample Couples. In practice, the sampling weights, W(h,i), are replaced in this formula by the analysis weights, described in the preceding sections, in order to compensate for survey nonresponse. An estimated ratio, including a mean or a proportion, is given by the ratio of two estimated totals.

As an example of the application of the above procedure, suppose we want to estimate a characteristic for the domain, d, of the survey population consisting of dual military couples. Then $\delta(i)_d$ would be set to 1 for all sample Couples who are in that domain and to 0 for all other sample Couples. Additionally, $\delta(i)_e$ would be set to 1 or 0, accordingly as the i-th sample Couple is or is not an eligible member of the survey population. Suppose, in particular, we wanted to estimate the total number of dependents, excluding "self and spouse," associated with domain d. Then y(i) will be the number of dependents that the i-th sample Couple has (which may be defined by either Spouse questionnaire item 50 or Member questionnaie item 67). Inserting these values into the above formula along with the corresponding analysis weights and summing over all sample Couples will yield the desired estimate. In practice, pre-existing computer software packages are used to make desired estimates.

The above formulations provide valid estimates for any domain of the population from which the sample was selected, including the one consisting of those couples, married for 6 months or longer, containing Members who had 10 months or more of active duty when the survey was fielded -- which is the survey population (or analylsis domain) of particular interest for the present survey. Caution in interpretation of results is advised because of the relatively low Couple response rate.

APPENDIX E

THE QUESTIONNAIRES

1985 Department of Defense
SURVEY OF MILITARY SPOUSES

OMB No. 07040203

Expires 9/30/85

The Department of Defense is conducting a survey of people married to active duty military personnel from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force. You have been selected to participate in this important survey. Please read the instructions on the next page before you begin the questionnaire.

NOTICE

Your survey instrument will be treated as confidential. All identifiable information will be used only by persons engaged in, and for the purposes of, the survey. It will not be disclosed to others or used for any other purpose. Only group statistics will be reported.

Your participation in the survey is voluntary. Failure to respond to any questions will not result in any penalty. However, your participation is encouraged so that the data will be complete and representative.

SURVEY PURPOSE

This is the first DoD-wide survey of this kind. It focuses on family well-being and family programs from the perspective of people married to active-duty military members. Your information will be combined with that provided by the other women and men married to military members in each of the four Services. The combined information will be used by the Services and the Department of Defense to evaluate the effectiveness of current policies and programs and to plan new ones. In addition to the information requested on the form, any additional comments you would like to make can be written on the enclosed comment sheet.
