TASK ANALYSIS VOLUME 2

INTRODUCTION

This volume contains task analysis data for AFSC 915X0, Medical Materiel, as part of a training requirements analysis (TRA). Detachment 5, USAF Occupational Measurement Squadron, conducted interviews with highly-qualified personnel to collect the data that is contained in this volume. The 915X0 USAF Job Inventory dated November 1989 provided the initial outline for this task analysis.

TASK ANALYSIS WORKSHEET FORMAT

The rest of this volume contains the task analysis worksheets (TAWs) for AFSC 915X0, Medical Materiel. The following is an explanation of the TAW headings.

1. TASK NUMBER: A sequential number assigned to each TRA task.
2. TASK STATEMENT: A meaningful unit of work. TRA tasks may be the same as Job Inventory (JI) task statements, or may include several closely related tasks from the JI. In some cases, TRA task statements do not correspond to JI tasks. Numbers in parentheses that follow a TRA task statement are equivalent JI task numbers.
3. TASK NOTES: This section is optional and may include abbreviations, cautions, or other notes about the TRA task.
4. TRAINING RECOMMENDATIONS: This section recommends where the task should be trained. Some examples are: upgrade OJT, qualification training, resident training, CDCs, etc.
5. EQUIPMENT, TOOLS, AND SUPPLIES: This section not only lists significant equipment, tools, and supplies required to perform the TRA task, but also forms, listings, etc. Common items, like pens, are not generally listed.
6. REFERENCES: This section lists the governing directives commonly used to perform the task.
7. CONDITION: Conditions state any special circumstances under which the task must be performed.
8. CUES: Cues are what prompt the need for the task to be performed, i.e., "customer requirement, receipt of form."
9. CONSTRAINTS: Any factors that may hinder or prevent the accomplishment of a task are listed in this section.
10. STANDARDS: This section identifies the criteria a supervisor, trainer, or task evaluator uses to decide if the task was adequately accomplished. For this analysis, task are performed in accordance with the references listed, i.e., "IAW REFERENCES."
11. ACTIVITIES: Significant steps in performing the TRA task are listed here. Activity statements are preceded by an "A."
12. SKILLS: Abilities Medical Materiel personnel must have to perform the activities. Skills generally identify training requirements that contribute to more than one TRA task. Skills are preceded by an "S."

13. KNOWLEDGE: Knowledge is a mental process that involves the recall and application of information. As defined in this analysis, knowledge items may not produce an observable result, but enable an individual to accomplish an activity or apply a skill. Knowledge statements are preceded by a "K."

Those activities, skills or knowledge which are the same as a JI task statement (just as printed in the JI or slightly reworded) have the JI designation following them in parentheses.

14. RELATED OCCUPATIONAL SURVEY DATA: This section gives the numbers of JI tasks which relate to the TRA task as well as numerical data about them, which will prove useful for training decisions.

a. Training Emphasis is a relative measure of the amount of structured training that first-enlistment personnel need to perform tasks successfully. These ratings are assigned by supervisors who are experienced members of the career ladder. For this specialty, tasks rated above 3.08 are high in training emphasis.

b. The next four numbers are the percentages of all members of the categories indicated (1st job, 1st enlistment, all 5-levels, and all 7-levels) who perform the JI task.

c. Task Difficulty is a relative measure of the length of time that the average airman takes to learn how to perform a task. These ratings are also assigned by career ladder supervisors. Tasks of average difficulty have a value of 5.0 and a standard deviation of 1.0, which means that a task with a rating of 6.0 or higher is considered difficult for first-term airman to learn how to perform.

d. Automated Training Indicator (ATI) is a computer-generated index calculated for each JI task that considers training emphasis, task difficulty, and percentage of 1st term members performing. The ATI is most useful for determining first-enlistment training requirements. TRA project analysts used ATI training decision logic and interpretation guidelines in ATCR 52-22, Occupational Analysis Program, when making training recommendations in this TRA.

15. USAF JOB INVENTORY TASK STATEMENTS: The JI task numbers and statements associated with each TAW. The statements in this section are those most closely related to the TRA task analyzed. Unlike JI tasks referenced with A, S, K, in this section, JI tasks are listed in Duty/Task numerical sequence.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION ON TASK ANALYSIS

MATERIEL HANDLING EQUIPMENT (MHE) is used in several of the tasks throughout the TRA. It is listed in the Skills section as "Operate MHE" and is also listed in the Equipment, Tools, and Supplies section and includes the following:

- FORKLIFT
- FOUR WHEEL HAND TRUCK
- PALLET JACK (POWERED, NON POWERED)
- STOCK PICKER CART
- TUG
- TWO WHEEL HAND CART

The MEDICAL LOGISTICS (MEDLOG) COMPUTER SYSTEM is used throughout the TRA. It is listed in the Skills section as "Operate MEDLOG computer system" and is also listed in the Equipment, Tools, and Supplies section and includes the following:

- COMPUTER
- FLOPPY DRIVES
- MAINFRAME
- MEDLOG SOFTWARE
- PRINTER

The CENTRAL PROCESSING DISTRIBUTION (CPD) COMPUTER SYSTEM is used in several tasks throughout the TRA. It is listed in the skills section as "Operate CPD computer system" and is also located in the Equipment, Tools, and Supplies sections and includes the following:

- MAINFRAME
- PRINTER
- CPD SOFTWARE
- DISK DRIVES

The BASE CONTRACTING AUTOMATED SYSTEM (BCAS) is used in several tasks throughout the TRA. It is listed in the Skills section as "Operate BCAS" and is also listed in the Equipment, Tools, and Supplies section and includes the following:

- COMPUTER
- BCAS SOFTWARE
- PRINTER
