13. ABSTRACT (Maximum 200 words) This report examines the patterns of community support program use among Army soldiers and their spouses. The data for the report are from a 1989 Army-wide survey of a probability sample of 11,035 soldiers in 528 active component Army units and 3,277 Army spouses. The report examines • The perceptions of program usefulness and the perceptions of Army policy impact on family members, the quality of Army family programs, and the helpfulness of Army community service personnel, and • User demographic characteristics and indicators of potential program or service need for over 30 separate Army services. Overall, patterns of program use vary by soldier rank and, to some extent, geographical location. All soldiers and spouses, however, believe that the Army community support services are essential to the well-being of the Army community.

ARMY COMMUNITY SUPPORT PROGRAMS: NEEDS AND ACCESS AMONG ARMY FAMILIES APPENDIX WITH SUPPLEMENTARY TABULATIONS

Introduction

The 1989 Army Soldier and Family Survey produced a wealth of information about soldier and spouse use rates among a list of 39 community support programs and soldier and spouse perceptions of each program's usefulness to the Army community. In conducting the analysis of the Army Soldier and Family Survey data, frequencies were calculated for soldiers and spouses by general demographic characteristics. For soldiers, these characteristics included

- Gender
- Race/ethnicity
- Rank
- Levels of education
- Region (CONUS, Europe, other OCONUS)
- Current housing location
- Number of children at home
- Family life course

Spouse demographic characteristics included

- Gender
- Soldiers' rank
- Spouse education level
- Region (CONUS, Europe, other OCONUS)
- Number of children at home
- Spouse employment status

The purpose of this appendix is twofold. First, the appendix serves as a record of all basic data used for the analysis upon which the main findings were based. Second, the appendix provides each program manager within CFSC, Child Development Services, MWR and other Army providers with a comprehensive profile of soldier and spouse program users, as well as a complete listing of the perceived program usefulness by demographic characteristics.

The appendix is organized alphabetically by title. The first page(s) present the soldier data; these tables are followed by a presentation of the spouse data.
