[Text] Defense of the dissertation to take place at the Moscow Order of the Red Banner for Labor State Pedagogical Institute imeni V. I. Lenin in April 1967

The communist transformation of everyday life is an important part of the process concerned with the establishment of a communist socio-economic formation. It is closely associated with a change in and the development of socialist social relationships and their gradual development into communist relationships.

This is why the Communist Party of the Soviet Union views comprehensive improvements in the living conditions of workers as one of the principal tasks concerned with building a communist society in our country.*

Over the past few years, a number of works dedicated especially to the problems of everyday life have appeared in philosophical literature: candidate dissertations (A. S. Lysakova, E. I. Matkhanova, I. Rakhimov, V. G. Sinitsyn, S. D. Tankayev, K. N. Khabibullin and A. Khashimov); scientific articles (N. A. Aitov, M. I. Lifanov, V. S. Markov, V. G. Sinitsyn and others), popular science brochures (G. Gerodnik, V. N. Kolbanovskiy, V. G. Sinitsyn and N. D. Shimin). Independent
