13. ABSTRACT (maximum 200 words) A universally accessible web-based marine mammal call library using the recordings collected over the years by William Schevill and William Watkins creates an opportunity for scientific studies requiring dependable reference datasets of sounds produced by a species in a defined geographic region during specific seasons. The Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution Bioacoustics Lab, begun in the 1950s under the direction of Schevill and Watkins, possesses approximately 2000 analog recordings of more than 90 species of marine animals. Metadata, organized and stored in stand-alone PCs, already exists for each of these recordings. In addition, these recordings are backed up by a reference library of more than 9000 selected marine animal papers (Watkins et al. 1990). This study presents an assessment of the contents of this marine mammal acoustic collection, recommendations for species-specific reference datasets, and potential architecture and costs for a web-based library.

Project Overview

This project was divided into two tasks, the first being a study to determine the possibility of creating a universally web-accessible call library using the William A. Watkins/William E. Schevill marine mammal acoustic data collection housed at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. This first task included reviewing the recordings and compiling a list of recordings by species, noting the geographic location, time of year and quality (SNR) for each recording and author of each recording, with an ultimate goal being the creation of vetted acoustic datasets of selected species of marine mammals that would serve as reference datasets for researchers. The second task was a review of the ten years of North Pacific Ocean SOSUS data collected by W. Watkins and the sonobuoy marine mammal call detection data collected by K. Stafford and others. We were tasked to evaluate and correlate marine mammal vocalizations that may have been recorded on each of these systems in the same geographic region.

The findings for Task 2 will be addressed in a separate final report and delivered at a later date. The present document is the final report for Task 1. In more detail, Task 1 and its milestones were as follows:

Task 1:

A. Initiate a review of the Watkins library of marine mammal recordings. Confirm that all analog recordings have been digitized at a sample rate of 192 kHz and copied onto duplicate DVDs. Confirm that all associated metadata have been properly entered into a searchable PC database.

Milestone: First complete inventory of the Watkins digitized marine mammal sound library and associated metadata. (Appendix 1)

B. Review the recordings and compile a list of recordings by species, noting the geographic location, time of year and quality (SNR) for each recording. Contact all recordists whose material is included in the Watkins sound library and request permission to include their material in a web-accessible archive.

Milestone: A list of digitized recordings arranged by species with a notation of SNR for each recording. (Appendix 2)

C. Prepare a preliminary report on the findings of Task 1 A and B, identifying potential recordings for inclusion into web-based reference datasets.

Milestone: The first detailed catalog of the recordings of marine mammal vocalizations contained in the Watkins library. (Appendix 3)

D. Identify and review web-accessible archives of marine mammal sounds. Assess web page formats including choices of displaying metadata.

Milestone: Assessment of state-of-the-art web-accessible sound libraries. (Appendix 4)

E. Prepare a final report on the content and quality of recordings of the Watkins marine mammal sound library. Discuss the feasibility of creating a universally accessible web-based archive. Include preliminary cost estimates for creating and maintaining a web-based archive.

Milestone: Documentation on the findings of this work including the potential contribution of a universally web-accessible Watkins digital tape library. (Appendix 5)

Appendices for Final Report submitted pursuant to award number N00244-07-1-0014

Appendix 1: First complete inventory of the Watkins digitized marine mammal sound library and associated metadata.

Milestone: October 2007

An initial review of the Watkins library of marine mammal recordings has been completed. Recordings of approximately 70 species of marine mammals are stored in the Woods Hole Oceanographic library. Table A1-1 is a list of species in the library. The recordings cover the years from the 1930s to the early 2000s. The recordings range from 1-4 channels. The recorded bandwidth ranged from 0 to nearly 100 kHz. To date, approximately 500 analog recordings have been digitized at a sample rate of 192 kHz. The metadata for each recording are organized in a searchable PC database. The fields comprising the metadata for each recording are listed in Table A1-2.

Field Name	Description
Record Number	Tape retrieval number
Cue or Time at tape end	Cue or time on tape (sec)
Number of Channels	Number of channels recorded
Identification of vocal animal	ID of animal vocalizing
Age	Age, sex of vocalizing animal
Behavioral Interaction	Behavioral activity of animal
Genus Species	Genus/species of vocalizing animal
Geographic Location A	ASFIS code (ex. ANW = Atlantic NW)
Observation Date	Date of recording
Notes	Details on recording observations
Other Species	Other species present during recording
Number of Animals	Number of animals vocalizing
Geographic Location B	Place name of recording site (ex. Key West, FL)
Geographic Location C	Latitude and longitude of recording Start
Observation Time	Time of recording (local time)
Ship Name	Name of recording platform
Author of Recording	Recordist
Location of Original Tape	Physical storage location of tape
Hydrophone Depth	Depth of hydrophone (m)
Recording Conditions	Sea state, weather, wind, etc
Recording Gear	Equipment (ex. Pemtec tape recorder)
Signal Level	Signal level (db receiving or source)
Signal Type	Clicks, whistles, burst pulse, etc

Appendix 2: Review the recordings and compile a list of digitized recordings by species, noting the geographic location, time of year and quality (SNR) for each recording.

Milestone: A list of digitized recordings arranged by species with a notation of SNR for each recording.

Note: Analog recordings not yet digitized are not included in this list.

55001	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:05.3	8	Hearing and echolocation observations. Very good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging.
55002	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:10.4	9	Hearing and echolocation observations. Very good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging.

55003	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	04:10.7	7	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 3.
55004	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	04:02.7	6	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 4
55005	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	03:40.0	6	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 5
55006	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	03:57.1	4	Hearing and echolocation observations. So-so recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Recorder troubles throughout. Overloaded sounds from dolphin. Reel 6
55007	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	03:43.0	5	Hearing and echolocation observations. OK recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Recorder troubles throughout. Reel 7
55008	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	03:54.8	6	Hearing and echolocation observations. OK recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Recorder troubles throughout. Reel 8
55010	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:15.2	8	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 10
55011	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:15.6	8	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 11

55012	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:15.4	8	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 12
55013	Tursiops truncatus	7/21/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:18.5	5	Hearing and echolocation observations. Recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 13
55014	Tursiops truncatus	7/24/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:16.6	5	Hearing and echolocation observations. Recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 14
55015	Tursiops truncatus	7/24/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:13.0	7	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 15
55016	Tursiops truncatus	7/27/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:16.8	7	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of echolocation clicks by a Tursiops. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 16
55017	Tursiops truncatus	7/27/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:15.7	5	Hearing and echolocation observations. Mostly ambient recording of Tursiops in the pond. Very few clicks. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 17
55018	Tursiops truncatus	7/27/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:13.1	8	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of clicks and click bursts. Feeding. Low ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 18
55019	Tursiops truncatus	7/28/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	09:36.9	5	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of clicks and click bursts. Feeding. Medium level of ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Reel 19

55020	Tursiops truncatus	7/28/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:12.2	6	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of clicks and click bursts. Feeding. Medium level of ambient of water splashes and equipment banging. Attenuator level changed in the latter half of recording. Much better. Reel 20
55021	Tursiops truncatus	7/28/1955	Nonamesset Is. pond, MA	N40	W070	1	08:13.5	7	Hearing and echolocation observations. Good recording of clicks and click bursts. Appendix 4: Identify and review web-accessible archives of marine mammal sounds. Assess web page formats including choices of displaying.

Milestone: May 2008

Two web-accessible sound “libraries”, MobySound (<http://hmsc.oregonstate.edu/projects/MobySound>) sponsored by Dr. David K. Mellinger of Oregon State University and the Macaulay Library of the Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell University (<http://www.birds.cornell.edu/macaulaylibrary/>), were identified and reviewed as models for the WHOI web sound library. MobySound is a freely accessible collection of vetted datasets of marine mammal vocalizations. The website was designed as a reference tool for researchers interested in the detection and automatic recognition of marine mammal sounds. Metadata for each sound file in MobySound includes: species vocalizing, geographic location of recording, sound speed profile, hydrophone depth, date and time of recording, recording gear, sampling rate of the recorded sound, SNR of recording and the copyright information of the recording. The Macaulay Library is more of a “library” in the traditional sense, containing sound collections recorded by individual researchers during their entire career. The searchable metadata fields include species vocalizing, geographic location of recording, hydrophone depth, date and time of recording, recording gear, sampling rate of the recorded sound, and the name and affiliation of the recordist.

Upon review of these web-accessible collections and their operational philosophies, a potential web page design for the WHOI sound collection is proposed. Figure A4-1 is a mock-up of a proposed web page for the marine mammal sound web database. Possible web page components for a digitized database are: pull-down list of marine animal species with common names and scientific names, pull-down list of dates of recordings, interactive window for playing and viewing waveform and spectrograms of animal vocalizations, and a ship track or map showing latitude and longitude location of acoustic recording. Metadata for each recording will include species, behavioral activity, number of animals, observation date, geographic location, recording conditions (weather, wind, etc), recording gear, recording platform (ship, shore, ice, aquarium, etc), quality of recording (signal strength), signal type (whistle, click, pulsed bursts, etc), sample rate of sound cut, duration of sound cut, number of channels recorded, etc. This web page is based upon a WHOI designed web-based application built using the “GeoBrowser Technologies.”

A Study on the Feasibility of Creating a Web-Accessible Marine Mammal Sound Library
Based upon the Collections at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution

Abstract

A universally accessible web-based marine mammal call library using the recordings collected over the years by William Schevill and William Watkins creates an opportunity for scientific studies requiring dependable reference datasets of sounds produced by a species in a defined geographic region during specific seasons. The WHOI Bioacoustics Lab under the direction of Schevill and Watkins recorded more than 90 species of marine animals resulting in approximately 2000 unique recordings. Metadata, organized and stored in stand-alone PCs, already exists for each of these recordings. In addition, these recordings are backed up by a reference library of more than 9000 selected papers (Watkins et al. 1990).

This study presents an assessment of the contents of this marine mammal acoustic collection, recommendations for species-specific reference datasets and potential architecture for a web-based library.

Introduction

As environmental laws are created by governments to protect and maintain our oceans, the U.S. Navy must discover new ways to conduct its operations, engage in research and maintain its military status while remaining in compliance with these laws. In particular, the Endangered Species Act (1973) and the Marine Mammal Protection Act (1972) have explicit regulations regarding naval activities that may occur in the presence of marine mammals. For this reason, it is important for the Navy to confidently know when and where to schedule its exercises so as to minimize any potential impacts upon marine mammals. Thus, for the past decade, the ability to monitor and predict the presence of marine mammals has been an ongoing topic of Naval sponsored research (Redfern et al. 2006, Watkins et al. 2000a, 2000b). Underwater acoustic detection methods, especially automated systems, have been developing rapidly in recent years due in part to their advantageous ability to monitor marine mammals regardless of environmental conditions. Ocean ambient sounds mixed with sounds that may or may not be produced by marine mammals are being recorded daily by the U.S. Navy (Clark 1994, Nishimura and Conlon 1994, Watkins et al. 1997) and other government agencies (Barlow and Taylor 1998, Fox et al. 2001). These hours of recordings are not useful for the identification of marine mammals without reference datasets with which to compare. The automation of detecting marine mammal species will require new databases that will provide consistent benchmarks on which to test and compare recognition methods. Free access to a database of oceanic acoustic data will be beneficial to the Navy and to researchers and educators worldwide. A marine mammal call archive provides researchers with a repertoire of species' vocalizations which may be compared to unidentified recordings. Researchers of bird song have realized that archived recordings are extremely valuable for research and education beyond the individual investigator's uses, and have recommended development of tape archives (Bradbury et al. 1999).

The creation of a universally accessible web-based marine mammal call archive using the WHOI Bioacoustics Lab's Marine Mammal Library creates an opportunity for many kinds of scientific studies, particularly those requiring a dependable reference dataset of sounds produced by a species in a defined geographic region during specific seasons. The WHOI Bioacoustics Lab under the direction of Schevill and Watkins recorded more than 90 species of marine animals resulting in approximately 2000 unique recordings. The primary recordings from these species now form a research sound library of about 6000 recordings, in addition to digital sound files organized in databases of more than 20,000 annotated files (Watkins et al. 1992). These are backed up by a reference library of more than 9000 selected papers (Watkins et al. 1990).

The WHOI library of marine mammal sounds would be an important resource for the ocean research community and would provide the largest and most comprehensive collection of marine animal sounds – primary underwater recordings, annotated digital sound files, organized data search and retrieval systems, relevant literature, and data logs. Most importantly, it would provide recordings definitively identified to species at known locations, times of year, and sometimes age/sex class.

History and Taxonomic Breadth of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution's Bioacoustics Sound Library

The pioneer in marine mammal acoustic behavior was WHOI's William E. Schevill. Schevill started the field of marine mammal bioacoustics at WHOI just after WWII. The first scientific recordings of the sounds of any cetaceans were made by Schevill and his wife, Barbara Lawrence, when they recorded the underwater calls of the beluga, Delphinapterus leucas, in the Saguenay River, Quebec, in 1948 (Schevill and Lawrence 1949). These early recordings were made with a WHOI-built Rochelle-salt crystal hydrophone and were captured on a wax disk using a Gray Audograph Dictaphone and later transferred to a 78-RPM phonograph disk (Schevill and Lawrence 1950).

Schevill and Lawrence also were the first to investigate hearing and sound production in the bottlenose dolphin, Tursiops truncatus. They demonstrated that these animals used their sounds for echolocation and food finding (Schevill and Lawrence 1956). Schevill and William Watkins were the first to publish a data collection of marine mammal sounds, a LP record album, “Whale and Porpoise Voices,” containing the first recordings of underwater sounds from eighteen species of marine mammals (Schevill and Watkins 1962). Other early sound publications also sometimes included phonograph recordings with the journal, such as the sounds from the walrus, Odobenus rosmarus, published by Schevill, Watkins and Ray (1966), and bearded seal, Erignathus barbatus, published by Ray, Watkins and Burns in 1969.

In addition to biological sound data from the work of WHOI researchers, other prominent researchers (Kenneth Norris, G. Carleton Ray, Donald Griffin, Melba and David Caldwell, James Johnson, Thomas Poulter, etc.) have contributed their own scientific field recordings to the sound library, increasing the taxonomic breadth of the WHOI Bioacoustics Sound Library. (See Table A5-1 for a list of species represented in the Library.) Non-biological oceanic acoustic data have also been organized and added to the sound library (ice noise, storm and wave effects, geological sounds, ship signatures, hydrodynamic sound, etc). These ambient recordings of the ocean environment are invaluable to researchers who are studying the apparently increasing level of “noise” in the world’s oceans.

The WHOI Bioacoustics Sound Library is the largest and most diverse archive of marine animal recordings in existence. For over six decades, the WHOI Bioacoustic lab had recorded more than 90 species of marine animals worldwide. Positively identified species from geographic regions ranging from the Arctic to the Antarctic and from Japan to Cape Cod were recorded by Schevill and Watkins (Figure A5-1).

According to a review by Watkins and Wartzok (1985) listing the first recordings of various marine mammal species and their accompanying publications, the very first recordings of fifty-one species of marine mammals are housed here, making this an invaluable Voucher Collection, the first positively identified recordings made of a particular species (Table A5-2).

Reference Data Sets

An initial review of the library of marine animal recordings has been completed. Contained in this library are recordings which have been definitively identified to species at known locations, times of year, and sometimes age/sex class. These benchmark reference datasets with their associated metadata represent the next step in the evolution of marine mammal acoustic classifiers. Suggested Reference Datasets of approximately 100 recordings for 55 species of marine mammals are listed in Table A5-3.

Curation and Digitization of Recorded Media

The recordings cover the years from the 1930s to the early 2000s. The recordings range from 1- 4 channels with a bandwidth ranging from 0 – 100 kHz. To date, approximately 1,000 analog recordings have been digitized with a sample rate of 192 kHz, a standard that has been agreed upon by other marine mammal acoustic researchers.

The recordings are in need of preservation. Since the life-span of reel-reel media is estimated to be 10 - 40 years, the best long-term preservation method is to make digital copies of the analog media (Council on Library and Information Resources and the Library of Congress 2006). Time is of the essence with regards to tape media. Some of these recordings only exist on the original reel-reel tape that was used by the recordist. The tapes are located in an environmentally-controlled vault at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. The Institution recognizes the scientific value of the collection and is committed to housing these data long-term in suitable facilities. The WHOI Bioacoustics Sound Lab is one of the few remaining facilities in the world that is capable of playing all recorded media. The required recording/playback equipment is fully functional and is maintained by WHOI personnel with over twenty years of experience in handling analog and digital marine animal acoustic recordings.

Web-based Library

Once these unique recordings have been digitized, and stored appropriately for a long-term archive, the data must be placed on the web in such a way that investigators, educators, students, and the public are able to: (1) freely and easily access and listen to acoustic samples from marine mammals, (2) observe spectrograms and other visual representations of these acoustic samples, (3) place these samples in a geographic and temporal context and be able to easily find related acoustic samples with the use of space, time, and keyword navigation tools incorporated into the web pages.

A web-based application could be built using the “GeoBrowser Technologies” that have been designed and developed at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution over the past nine years (Lerner and Maffei 2001). This technology has been successfully used by WHOI scientists to handle the vast volumes of digital video and camera data generated by ocean exploratory vehicles. The GeoBrowser tool enables scientists and educators to access an entire digital library from a laptop computer. It is expected that a tool supporting these functions will be of significant benefit to marine mammal scientists, educators and students who require vetted acoustic marine mammal data. Figure A5-2 is a computer screen-shot example of a marine animal vocalization and its associated metadata as accessed from a web-based library of reference data sets.

A web-accessible database could be modeled after the PC database that has been in use in the WHOI Bioacoustic Lab since 1990 (Watkins et al. 1992). Possible web page components for a digitized database are: pull-down list of marine animal species with common names and scientific names, pull-down list of dates of recordings, interactive window for playing and viewing waveform and spectrograms of animal vocalizations, and a ship track or map showing latitude and longitude location of acoustic recording. Metadata for each recording will include species, behavioral activity, number of animals, observation date, geographic location, recording conditions (weather, wind, etc), recording gear, recording platform (ship, shore, ice, aquarium, etc), quality of recording (signal strength), signal type (whistle, click, pulsed bursts, etc), sample rate of sound cut, duration of sound cut, number of channels recorded, etc.

Hardware and Software for Database

The following is the recommended state-of the-art computer configuration for serving and storing the proposed web-accessible database. The estimated disk-space would provide one with a total of 12TB of raw disk space. (Usable space after formatting and RAID would be around 9TB.) The Sun x4100 is a 1U rack mount server from Sun Microsystems. It would provide the file sharing and management of the database storage. It is also considered as an ideal web server. The second item is the Promise VTrak disk array. It holds up to 12 SATA disks and is what provides the actual disk storage. The third item is a Serial Attach SCSI (SAS) host bus adapter and is the interface card that connects the server to the disk array. Both the disk array and file server have dual redundant power supplies and hot swappable disks. (The system would continue to run even if a power supply or disk fails.)

I've listed 6 disks at $140 each. This is an estimate of disk space required for a total raw capacity of 6TB, which would yield about 4TB after formatting and RAID. One can always add more drives later.

Itemized Hardware

Sun Fire X4100 M2 x64 Server: 2x AMD Opteron Model 2216 (2.4GHz/1MB) processor with 4x1GB PC2-5300 DDR2-667 memory, 2x 73GB HDD, DVD-ROM/CDRW, 2x High Efficiency PSU, Service Processor, 4x 10/100/1000 Ethernet ports, 3x USB 2.0 ports, 2x 8-lane PCI-E slots

No power cord, order Geo-specific Xoption Standard Configuration. RoHS-5 =
$2895

Promise VTrak J310sS - hard drive array = $2595

Sun StorageTek SAS Host Bus Adapter - PCIe = $550

1TB SATA II Disks - 6@$140 = $840

Hardware Total: $7996

WHOI Rack Space (includes conditioned power and cooling): $350/U x 3 = $1050

WHOI Network Connection: $235

Four hours labor for racking and initial configuration: $220

Total: $8395

WHOI, recognizing the importance of universally web-accessible databases, hosts many scientific and educational databases in all fields of ocean sciences. WHOI already possesses the cyber-infrastructure which is designed to support the processes of data collection and data lifecycle management.

Conclusion

Digital databases offer particularly efficient mechanisms for storing and disseminating audio information along with associated metadata. A database such as what is herein described will help enable the marine mammal acoustic field to grow into one where investigators and educators can specialize in different phases of collection and analysis of standardized datasets.
